BASILICA CISTERN

Giant underground Roman cistern carried by 336 marble columns spread over an area of 9800 square meters.

One of the magnificent ancient buildings of Istanbul is the Basilica Cistern located in the southwest of Hagia Sofia. Constructed for Justinianus I, the Byzantium Emperor (527-565), this big underground water reservoir is called as "Yerebatan Cistern" among the public because of the underground marble columns. As there used to be a basilica in the place of the cistern, it is also called Basilica Cistern.

In the cistern, which opened its doors again after extensive restoration works, many innovations such as a dynamic lighting design that can be integrated with cultural and artistic activities when necessary, were applied in order to preserve the mystical atmosphere of the historical area and make its characteristics visible.
